NEAR DUBLIN.

By Hal E. Roach. ✓

Con, the letter man in a small Irish Hamlet learns much about his neighbor's doings by reading their mail and postal cards. He is in love with a fair colleen who also has as suitor, the rich squire of the county. The Squire attempts to frame a story on Con, and Con is sent to jail. But like all novels, true love prevails, the guilty squire in turn put into the lock-up, and Con, escapes with his sweetheart.
